Project: Main reception refurbishment
Location: The London Independent Hospital
Designer: D W Edwards

BMI Healthcare, part of the General Healthcare Group, are the UK's premier private health care provider with acute private patient hospitals and outpatients centres in 56 locations around the country. As part of a national roll out of reception re-branding projects, Integral Interiors were tasked with completing a complete refurbishment of the main reception at The London Independent.

The works were planned on a fast track to ensure minimal disruption to hospital staff, patients and visitors, and complete the project during a quiet period. The works consisted of a new main reception desk, all new decorations, Amtico flooring and a "feature" wall constructed of Armourcoat the Venetian specialist plaster.

Works also included changes to the lighting systems, CCTV, data, fire alarm, telephones and plumbing to facilitate the new design. All works were in a "live" environment therefore the planning and coordination of the project was critical to ensure the hospital continued to function during the works. This was done by planning all works in conjunction with hospital staff and consultants, this ensured buy in and that the works were completed with no delays or disruptions to the running of the hospital.
